the continuous expansion of human rights can often appear to be positive yet it provokes criticism this volume argues against the internationalisation of human rights proving the world is moving from bilateralism to community interests stating contentious supervision evaluation and substitution are far more common than genuine cooperation the sage handbook of human rights will comprise a two volume set consisting of more than 50 original chapters that clarify and analyze human rights issues of both contemporary and future importance the handbook will take an inter disciplinary approach combining work in such traditional fields as law political science and philosophy with such non traditional subjects as climate change demography economics geography urban studies mass communication and business and marketing in addition one of the aspects of mainstreaming is the manner in which human rights has come to play a prominent role in popular culture and there will be a section on human rights in art film music and literature not only will the handbook provide a state of the art analysis of the discipline that addresses the history and development of human rights standards and its movements mechanisms and institutions but it will seek to go beyond this and produce a book that will help lead to prospective thinking written by psychologists historians and lawyers this handbook demonstrates the central role psychological science plays in addressing some of the world s most pressing problems over 100 experts from around the world work together to supply an integrated history of human rights and psychological science using a rights and strengths based perspective it highlights what psychologists have done to promote human rights and what continues to be done at the united nations with emerging visions for the future uses of psychological theory education evidence based research and best practices the chapters offer advice on how to advance the 2030 global agenda on sustainable development challenging the view that human rights are best understood through a political lens this scholarly collection of essays shows how psychological science may hold the key to nurturing humanitarian values and respect for human dignity when the universal declaration of human rights was adopted it was intended that the united nations and other international and regional organizations would follow up on its provisions by adopting legally binding human rights treaties for the practical implementation and protection of human rights on the ground inside countries a solid corps of united nations and regional treaties now exist representing a veritable international code of human rights it is crucial that they be implemented and applied both in letter and in spirit and in good faith in the countries that have ratified or acceded to them the human rights treaties are living instruments and their supervisory bodies apply them in the light of evolving conditions and circumstances nationally regionally and internationally the treaties and the jurisprudence they generate represent living international human rights law it is important that governments and the general public understand their provisions and the protections they provide this is a defining work on the value of human rights treaties adopted by the united nations and regional organizations comprehensive and written by leading authorities the book brings out dramatically the policy roles and practical value of the treaties in protecting fundamental human rights and the international human rights jurisprudence they generate the book is rich in its discussions of the case law developed by supervisory bodies established under the human rights treaties it also has informed and illuminating discussions of contemporary challenges to the implementation of international and regional human rights conventions this is a historic and defining discussion of the value of human rights treaties and their supervisory bodies this book is designed to introduce law students legal actors and human rights activists particularly participants in human rights dialogues with china to the process and reality of a newly confident china s participation in the international human rights system albeit with inherent challenges from an international and comparative perspective one of the key findings of the author s research is that progress towards human rights depends more on judges than on legislators chinese legislators have enacted a series of reforms in order to better protect human rights unfortunately these reforms have not led to greater adherence to china s international human rights obligations in practice the reforms failed because they have generally been misunderstood by chinese judges who often have a limited understanding of international human rights norms specifically this book will examine how judicial misunderstandings have blocked reforms in one specific area the use of severe punishments based on international human rights theory and case studies and data analyses this examination has several purposes the first is to suggest that china ratify the iccpr as the next step for its substantive progress in human rights and as a good preparation for its re applying to be a member of the un human right council in the future the second is to explain how judges could be better educated in international human rights norms so as to greatly reduce the use of severe punishments and better comply with china s human rights obligations the third is to demonstrate how the international community could better engage with china in a manner that is more conducive to human rights improvements the author s ultimate goal is to enhance dialogue on human rights in china between judges and the chinese government between chinese judges and their foreign counterparts and between china s government and the international community another significant aim of this book is to clarify the controversial question of what obligations china should undertake before its ratification of the iccpr and to re examine trends in its developing human rights policy after standing down from the council in late 2012 the tortuous progress of china s criminal law and criminal justice reforms has confirmed that chinese judges need further instruction on how to apply severe punishments in a manner consistent with international standards judges should be encouraged to exercise more discretion when sentencing so that penalties reflect the intent of relevant domestic laws as well as the international human rights standards enumerated in the iccpr in order to better educate and train judges this book contains introductory chapters that examine the severe punishments currently available to chinese judges from an international human rights perspective to illustrate how chinese justice currently falls short of international norms this paper also examines several cases that are considered to be indicative of china s progress towards greater respect for human rights and the rule of law these cases demonstrate that china still has a long way to go to achieve its goals at least before abolishing the death penalty forced labor and torture
